

Am I Worthy?

I hear the applause, but know I made mistakes,
Am I really worthy of love for goodness sakes?
There are so many others that are far better than me,
All I was, was the best that I could be.

For some it comes so naturally, they are blessed with a rare gift,
I have some talent and abilities, but I don't know where I truly fit.

I am a songwriter, pianist, singer, composer and poet,
But which is my real gift and how should I show it?
I manage to get the job done, manage to have some fun,
Though I know my style might not be for everyone.

I truly feel right now I'm almost at the top of my game,
And will never be accused of always being the same.
When I lift people's spirits and hear their cheers,
I want to keep doing this for another hundred years.

If I keep provoking smiles, I know I'm worthy.
If I flourish through trials, I know I'm worthy.
If I do it with style, I know I'm worthy.
If I keep going mile after mile, I know I am worthy.

My father once said, "If anything is worth doing, it's worth doing right".

So to honor him, I try to do the best I can every single night!
